Son of Nachum Mandel, a soldier in 606 Coy Pioneer Corps.

Address: Haifa, Israel

Acknowledgements

Dalia Rubinstein, a friend and a good manuscript reader.

Yehuda Scheffer, Colonel (ret.), for the authentic military documents that were invaluable for the interpretation of this diary. His assistance was particularly helpful for the understanding of the background and fine military nuances included in the manuscript.

Forward

1. The complete Original War Diary is in the holding of "The British National Archives" (File: WO 169/2423).
2. The original War Diary from November and December 1941 has not been located. For that period only, the transcription is based on an earlier version of the original War Diary transcript, the source of which is unknown.
3. The War Diary of 606 Coy P. C. (606 Company in the Pioneer Corps), which describes events in Egypt during February 1941, has not been found in The British National Archives.
4. The War Diary of 606 Coy which recorded events in Greece from March until 14 April 1941 has not been found. On 7 March 1941, in Egypt, the company left El-Amiriya camp by train to Alexandria. The next day the company embarked in Alexandria Port on the light cruiser HMAS "PERTH". On 9 March 1941, the company disembarked in Piraeus, Greece.
5. On 15 April 1941, 90 soldiers and one officer of the 603 Coy Pioneer Corps were attached to the 606 Coy. As of that date, in most cases, the War Diary for Greece and Crete refers to both sections as 606 Coy. However, in the Heading of the War Diary there is a clear reference that the content of the diary refers to 606 Coy + a detachment of 603 Coy Pioneer Corps.

6. This War Diary describes events that took place in Milos from 23 April 1941 until 1 May 1941, although recorded very briefly (three lines). On the morning of 23 April 1941, 606 Coy Deputy Commander Captain E. W. Christie, MC. (Military Cross) was killed in enemy action - during the attack and bombing of the “PANCRATION” on its way to Milos Bay – by Italian airplanes. During the battle, the company shot down two enemy planes. The company arrived to shore in the early afternoon of that day. On 24 April 1941, the ship sunk. While staying in Milos Island, the company endured several air raids daily, shot down two enemy planes and overcame a heavy attack by 15 hydroplanes.
7. The events on the island of Crete – in which 606 company actions took place in the course of May 1941 - were described by an unknown soldier and signed by 2/Lt. Mordechai Shyfman. The person who recorded the events did not use fluent English, and therefore the records contain numerous spelling and grammatical mistakes. Some of the spelling mistakes were corrected and some grammatical mistakes were left in order to maintain the authenticity of the War Diary.
8. Pages in the War Diary of 606 Coy that records events in Egypt during June 1941 has not been found in The British National Archives. Perhaps they have never been written, as at that time the company was in the process of reorganizing.
9. Pages in the War Diary of 606 Coy recording events in Cyprus from October 1941 and November 1941, as well as the pages recording events in July 1942 have not been found in The British National Archives.
10. Notes and corrections would be greatly appreciated. Please contact: Shaked60@gmail.com .
